

Alastair Lukies CBE

Prime Minister's Business Ambassador for FinTech

Available For:

- Keynote Speaking

MAKE AN ENQUIRY

About

Alastair Lukies CBE is a UK businessman and entrepreneur best known as a pioneer and champion for the UK's global FinTech industry.

He founded his company Monitise in 2003 which, three years later, was recognised as a 'Technology Pioneer' by the World Economic Forum and in June 2007 Alastair led the company's de-merger from Morse and listing on the LSE's AIM market. During his time as CEO, Monitise grew to a market cap of $2 billion, employing 1500 staff on four continents.

In January 2014, Alastair Lukies was first appointed as a Business Ambassador to the Prime Minister for the financial services industry by the UK Government, and today acts as the sole Business Ambassador for FinTech. He was named Non-Executive Chairman of FinTech industry body, Innovate Finance, at its launch in August 2014. Alastair was awarded a CBE for services to mobile banking and charity in June 2014, and was named Entrepreneur of the Year at the 2011 Growing Business Awards.

Prior to conceiving, financing and successfully building Monitise, Alastair was a co-founder of epolitix.com, the portal for Westminster, Whitehall and the devolved institutions.

Alastair Lukies' deep knowledge of global retail banking, payments and the broader FinTech ecosystem, combined with a unique set of UK government, industry and entrepreneur relations make him well placed to help build and develop The Collective's presence and momentum in the UK, Europe and internationally.

Video

TAGS FOR ALASTAIR LUKIES CBE

Mergers & Acquisitions

Entrepreneur

Finance

FinTech

Banking

MAKE AN ENQUIRY