About

Chortle Award nominee and BBC New Comedy Award Finalist, Steve Williams is one of the most exciting and electrifying live performers of the new comedy generation.

Steve never fails to surprise and engage audiences with his hybrid of bizarre stories, larger than life physicality, spontaneous improvisation and his off-the-wall take on everyday life. His three solo shows at the Edinburgh Fringe have garnered considerable critical success.

Steve Williams premiered his first solo stand-up show Steve Williams: Excitable at the Edinburgh fringe in 2006, he returned in 2007 with Steve Williams: Binge Thinking, which was followed by a national tour of Edinburgh and Beyond. This year Steve toured with his new stand-up show Stand Up Story Man.

Steve Williams' TV credits include appearances Michael McIntyre's Comedy Roadshow, Edinburgh and Beyond and The Comedy Store for Paramount and he recently appeared on Dave Gorman's Absolute Radio Show (Absolute Radio) and 7 Day Sunday (Radio 5Live). Steve is also a core writer on Russell Howard's Good News on BBC3.

Testimonials

It's not often I laugh so hard that I snort like a pig. But I did in Steve William's show... if you are any sort of comedy fan, you should see this show... There are some one-liners and asides that I am still quoting three days later.

Rosie Carnahan, Chortle.

His affable manner and skill at ad-libbing encourages audience contributions and Williams generously indulges them, his arcane knowledge and impressive capacity for regional accents creating an inclusive environment where everyone feels in on the joke... Yet alongside these more surreal episodes, he delivers acutely resonating moments of everyday observation. A likeable jack of so many comedy trades, Steve Williams is emerging as a master of them all.

Jay Richardson, The Scotsman.
