About

Soldier, author, columnist, broadcaster and commentator, Colonel Tim Collins is best known for his leadership skills honed over a career lasting 22 years with the British Army including eight years as an officer in the elite Special Air Service.

Tim came to public notice with his address to the troops on the eve of the invasion of Iraq, when, as commander of the 1,200 strong Royal Irish battlegroup, he urged his men to 'liberate and not to conquer'.

He has since left the Army and published his memoirs of command in the form of the best selling 'Rules of Engagement'. He is currently CEO of a private consulting company providing security and policing training and advice.

Colonel Tim Collins was educated at The Royal Belfast Academical Institution, Queen's University and the Royal Military Academy Sandhurst. A Graduate of the British Army Staff College, Tim holds a Masters Degree as well as a degree in Economics from Queen's University Belfast. Tim is an honorary member of Rutherford College at the University of Kent at Canterbury.

Testimonials

“

“

Tim gave a very entertaining after dinner speech which he pitched perfectly to our young people who were receiving awards for their completed apprenticeships. The adventures he recounted were put in perspective for the audience, providing real life lessons with great humour. Highly recommended.

TTE Training Ltd

Our senior management have been cascading the messages down and I have heard several of them give direct quotes from Colonel Collins' presentation.

Camelot Business

“

Very well received by the audience - comments were that they found it very refreshing and inspirational.

Thales

“

Inspiring, funny and above all practical about what gets people committed

Shell

“

Excellent feedback across the board even from the most difficult to please of the partners.

Terry Renouf, Berrymans Lace Mawer.

“

Tim Collins was a great success... very good, we really enjoyed him. He was inspiring, funny and practical about what works in terms of getting people committed... It's good to see someone who has done extremely well in their own area and to hear what they have learned from their experience.

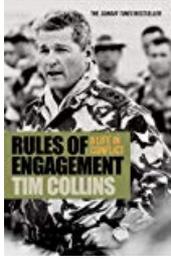

Richard Lewis, Pecos.

“

Tim Collins filled every seat in the room. He was funny and the delegates were amazed with his story. He stayed for a book signing and had a queue all the way through the exhibition hall.
